Lord Kitchener

"It cannot be true," was the first word from every man's lips when the electric spark flashed the news of the tragic ending of Lord Kitchener, Britain's minister of war, and his entire staff. Yet it was the truth that was spoken. The "fortunes of war" have robbed mankind of a striking personage, and England of a strong pillar of defense.

Astonishment that his nation had allowed this military leader and genius to place his life in jeopardy on the high seas was tempered with the knowledge that in all probability few were aware of his having undertaken the journey.

Kitchener was a law unto himself in his comings and goings, and it was this independence of action that made him the commanding figure in English affairs during the last twenty years of his career. He was first of all a soldier to whom the chance of death was merely one of the fortunes of war. What the effect of his own ending might have on the destinies of England was undoubtedly weighed in the balance of his own judgement, but having marked out the line of duty, he marched straight towards the goal.

A brave soldier and a wise one, not merely England, but all the world, mourns for him.

Yuan Shih-Kai

THE death of Yuan Shih-kai, President of China, by the hand of an assassin removes from the difficult Oriental situation a man who has strongly impressed his individuality upon the times in which he lived. His demise probably will tend to bring revolution and anarchy to a close, for however much he did for China in the first years of his ascendancy, it was apparent to all the world that his period of public beneficence had ceased.

Yuan Shih-kai had lost the confidence of the Chinese people and had opened the door to armed revolt. Province after province had forsworn allegiance to the Peking government, and the relations of the new Republic with Japan had more than once neared the breaking point. Intrigue had supplanted fair-dealing. Oriental diplomacy which enmeshed all who approached this ruler in overseas affairs.

Of the man himself much has been written. He first became prominent in Chinese affairs when in 1910 he raised an army of fifty thousand soldiers, infantry, cavalry, artillery and engineers, trained them in European drill and tactics, and maintained them out of his own private purse. It was this army of Mukden under the leadership of Yuan Shih-kai that finally enabled him to dominate the affairs of the Republic and assume the reins of government. His later course of action indicated that he neither understood the mettle of his own followers nor had any just appreciation of the dreams and aspirations of the men who led the revolution.

And so he has passed from the scene of his former brief triumphs, by the quick methods of Oriental diplomacy, and the Republic of China goes marching on. An election would have taken too long and have cost too much.

It remains to be seen whether the trade-guilds and commercial interests of Canton and Kwangtung will again join allegiance to the north, as it also remains to be seen whether another strong man will succeed him who has fallen.

T. R.

THE American people have been charitable. They have obeyed the Biblical injunction and have not only suffered long but have been kind. Three long years of spineless indecision in Congress and the White House have turned the attention of all red-blooded Americans in one direction.

"Watchful waiting" has had its day. What men want now is leadership, backbone and decision in the next incumbent of the presidential chair, and unless all signs fail they are going to have it. As all valleys lead up to the mountain top so all political trails and by-paths point towards Theodore Roosevelt as the next President of the United States of America.

These trails may seem to lead towards "favorite sons" where they first start, but as they merge into the broad highway along which the whole nation is sturdily trudging there is no mistaking that this is Oyster Bay street, and it leads to the Capitol.

A prominent citizen of this city returning home from the theater last night with his family, was insulted on the public streets by drunken toughs who disgraced the uniform they wear. It was "booze" again. How long will smug Christian citizens of a civilized city stand for the indiscriminate licensed sale of the poison that robs men of their honor, women of their virtue, beggars little children, and makes beasts of those who become its slaves?

The Hawaiian delegation at Chicago is living up to the reputation of the land, and is exhibiting that rare lack of unanimity of opinion that is said to be our chief characteristic. But then, there is never any difference of opinion in a graveyard. It is better to be a live independent in Chicago than to be a vest-pocket delegate in St. Louis, or Cathy, or any other foreign port.

Another Pork Barrel

THE rivers and harbors bill passed by the Senate carries an appropriation of forty-three million dollars. Nine Democratic and twenty-three Republican senators voted against it.

The substitute bill which would have transformed this branch of the public service into a department with a lump-sum budget appropriation was defeated by one vote.

For twenty years the commercial and shipping interests of the United States have been trying to get congress to grow up to a realization of the part the government should play in providing adequate facilities to take care of the tremendous volume of domestic and foreign trade.

Thirty million dollars spent each year would in ten years complete most of the important projects which have been approved by the board of army constructing engineers under whose general supervision these appropriations must be expended, but an all-wise congress decrees otherwise.

Thirty per cent of the funds set aside for making straight the paths of river, lake and ocean traffic are pork, just plain, greasy pork and nothing more. Congress knows it and the people know it.

New York, Galveston and San Francisco, Honolulu, New Orleans and Boston must rest content with what meagre sums the appropriation committee grudgingly allows them while millions are poured out in "doubtful districts" to dredge harbors which no commerce enters, deepen rivers where there is not enough water to float a flock of mud-hens, and construct ship-channels and concrete docks for fleets of canal boats.

The legitimate commerce of the United States has to wait. Projects approved by the board of engineers twenty years ago are still dragging along in desultory fashion, a piece of a break-water built one year, a chunk of land dredged out in a beautiful blue-printed ship's channel some other time and place, nothing finished nothing completed.

Hawaii has had its own sad experiences. Kalihi channel and turning basin may eventuate in 1940, and at some equally remote period Kuhio Bay, Kahului and Nawiliwili may realize on their breakwaters, ship's basins and other improvements needed to accommodate the rapidly increasing demands of ocean commerce. The trade between Hawaiian and mainland ports already amounts to $100,000,000 annually, but adequate appropriations cannot be secured to construct needed harbor improvements at Island terminals.

Nevertheless thirteen million dollars' worth of "pork" has been voted by congress to strengthen the wobbly political fortunes of backwoods congressmen whose continued tenure in office depends on the lavish expenditure of government funds in their respective districts.

A Question of Policy

THE policy of the Advertiser in fighting the legalized sale of alcoholic poisons within this Territory will not be changed to suit the Ad Club or any other civic organization. The communication reprinted in another column which was read at the noon luncheon by the secretary of that live aggregation of businessmen yesterday assumes that this paper is amenable to influence in its handling of this and possibly other questions of public morality.

The Advertiser is a booster when it knocks booze. It will continue to give the widest publicity to crimes bred of the whisky bottle until the "little brown jug" and the homicidal jag are banished from these Islands.

This is the policy of this paper and in hewing to the line it is "animated by what we term civic patriotism—the desire to make Honolulu a prosperous, intelligent, law-abiding, clean-lived city," using the words of Rev. George Laughton, the orator of the day.

Booze breeds crime, poverty and moral turpitude. Its licensed sale in a civilized community is an anachronism. It is no more necessary that the whisky trade should be conducted under what amounts to government patronage and protection than that the church should license men to rob, loot and enslave as was the custom in the Dark Ages.

The credit of Hawaii is good. The price list of a Pacific Coast trust company and bond agency mailed to possible investors here offers one $100,000 lot of Territory of Hawaii refunding 4s "at 102.75 and interest, to yield over 3.80 per cent to optional date of redemption May 15, 1936 and 4 per cent thereafter." Some of these refunding bonds, dated May 15, 1916, were sold at par and some at 100.10. The trade circular advertising this bargain states that the assessed property valuation back of the securities is $176,601,222, and the total debt $9,774,000. The population of Hawaii is given as 227,391.

Sagamore Hill is in Oyster Bay, so that long-distance telephone message from some mysterious somebody to someone else about something-or-other, was a good deal like a man in Kaimuki telephoning to Kalihi.

Violation of the neutrality of the United States is again charged against denizens in these waters. It is reported on excellent authority that Portuguese men-of-war have submerged bathers at Waikiki.

SAN JOSE TRAGEDY;
CAUSE BEGAN HERE

Roy Asselin, Formerly of Honolulu, Shoots Woman and Kills Himself

The last coast mails brought news of a tragedy in California which seems to have had its beginning in a love affair in Honolulu. In San Jose on the twenty-seventh of last month Roy Asselin, who lived here up to about two years ago, shot and almost mortally wounded Mrs. Henrietta Long, and then shot himself. He died soon after arriving at a hospital, but the woman probably will live.

Asselin came here about four years ago, and was employed by E. R. Bath as a plumber. That he had a love affair of a serious nature was well known to his associates while he was here. The young woman whom he was apparently courting may or may not be the Mrs. Long whom he shot in San Jose, but those who knew him here think that the tragedy is a continuation of the troubles he had here.

Asselin's inamorata went to the Coast in 1913. Shortly after she left he got a cablegram from her, as he stated, and he left at once for the Coast. He came back by return steamer, saying that things were all right, and his acquaintances assumed that a quarrel had been healed by his visit to San Francisco. He worked here again for a time and then left for the Coast, in the fall of 1913.

The San Jose Mercury has the following account of the tragedy, which occurred:

"Following a quarrel in front of a Market-street dance hall, Roy Asselin, aged twenty-eight, member of a prominent family of this city, shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Henrietta Long, twenty-four, of 1045 Harrison street, San Francisco, and then fatally wounded himself. He died a few minutes later at the emergency hospital.

"According to the young woman's statement at the Columbia hospital, where she was taken for treatment, Asselin had been drinking and she had then refused to dance with him.

Shoots Victim At Dance
"According to the story of witnesses, Asselin had attended the dance but sat around all evening with a morose expression on his face. Mrs. Long left the dance shortly after midnight with an unidentified man, who is described as being short and stout. At the foot of the stairs the couple were accosted by Asselin, who hit the unidentified man on the nose with his fist and then seized Mrs. Long by the arm. They had an argument which attracted the attention of passers-by. Asselin then drew a pistol and shot Mrs. Long under the arm. She staggered and fell into the arms of M. Springer, manager of a local publication known as The Main Event, who was standing nearby with Roy Taylor, an amateur pugilist.

Asselin walked along a couple of steps, then shot himself in the region of the heart. He walked a few steps further, then shot himself again, this time through the heart. Policeman Kelly ran up at this moment, covered Asselin with his pistol and at the same time knocked the pistol out of the man's hand with a club. Lying prostrate on the pavement, Asselin remarked that the policeman might as well leave him alone as he was already dead. In spite of the fact he was shot through the heart, Asselin lived until he reached the emergency hospital and was still alive when Dr. Van Dalsem arrived to attend him. 'I never saw a case like it, stated the doctor. 'I don't see how the man could have fired the second shot into himself after receiving a wound like the first one.'

All Happened Quickly
"Springer, who caught Mrs. Long in his arms, stated that she cried out that she was shot, when Asselin fired the first time. 'Take care of me please,' she said, as she fell into his arms. Springer thought for a moment that Asselin was going to fire again at the woman; but the would-be slayer walked away and then shot himself. 'It all happened so suddenly that neither Springer nor Taylor realized for several moments that they had witnessed a tragedy. As the second and third shots rang out the wounded woman asked Springer, 'Did he kill himself?'

Governor Pinkham is notified of the death of Mr. Yuan Shih-kai, president of China, by a cablegram from the Chinese Consul in Honolulu. The governor has been asked to accept a position as one of the directors of the National Defense League. He will likely do so.

Chinese Consul Officially Advises Government
Governor Pinkham yesterday received from Chinese Consul Tze-ang Woonhuan official notice of the death of Yuan Shih-kai, president of China, together with notice that the presidency had been temporarily taken by the vice-president, Li Yuan Hung, as stated in the official despatches from Washington to the consul, published yesterday morning. The governor replied at once, as follows:

"Sir: I deeply regret the death of the President of China, His Excellency Yuan Shih-kai, and have ordered the American flag placed at half-mast during the office hours of June 7. 'I also acknowledge your notification that His Excellency Li Yuan Hung has assumed the presidency ad interim of the Chinese Republic.'

Donald S. Bowman, chief sanitary inspector of the Island of Hawaii, with headquarters in Hilo, will return July 4 from the mainland. He went to attend the annual conference of sanitary inspectors and engineers in Washington, D. C.

SAN DIEGO EXHIBIT
MAY BE ABANDONED

Promotion Committee Hears Severe Criticism of Hawaiian Feature of Exposition

Severe criticism of Hawaii's exhibit at the San Diego exposition was the principal feature of yesterday afternoon's meeting of the promotion committee. The committee seemed disposed to withdraw all its support from the exhibition, but deferred action, at the suggestion of Secretary Taylor, until its representatives in California reply to a request for a report.

According to the reports there appears to have been some disagreement between Alexander Hume Ford, at whose instance the exhibit was placed, and J. W. Scott and F. J. Halton, San Francisco representatives of the promotion committee.

For Pan-Pacific Club
The exhibit is in behalf of the Pan-Pacific Club, and the local committee agreed to give twenty-five dollars a month to the cause, with the understanding that Australia, New Zealand, Alaska and other communities of the Pacific were to share the cost. Some of them have failed to do so.

The promotion committee sent kiosks, models of bungalow schoolhouses, and a good deal of other exhibit material, and it was all placed in the Hawaiian section. When Ford, as head of the Pan-Pacific Club, visited the fair, he caused the exhibits to be scattered round in various places, but recently Scott has rearranged them as before.

G. Fred Bush, who has served a term on the promotion committee, was asked to address the board on the subject of the San Diego exhibit, Bush having just returned from an extended trip over the mainland. Mr. Bush's remarks precipitated the discussion which led to suggestions that the whole enterprise be abandoned. He said that the kiosks were not well placed and that they were dirty and dusty. There were some coffee and pineapple, supposedly from Hawaii, being sold, but the pineapples were decayed and rotten. He inquired among waiters regarding where they got the pineapples and was told that they were "bought down town." Mr. Bush said he was very disgusted and disappointed with the whole layout. He thought the exhibit ought to be removed, as it was not doing Hawaii any good at all.

Mistake To Support Exhibit
Mr. McInerney said he had heard unfavorable reports about the exhibit at San Diego, and he thought it a mistake for the promotion committee to support it. If it was not a credit to the Islands, it ought to be dropped. He said he had also heard that the attendance was small.

On a motion being put that support of the exhibit be withdrawn, Taylor suggested that it might be well first to hear from the committee's representatives in California. Action was deferred on this ground, and Scott and Halton will be asked to report.

OAHU'S CHIEF CHEMIST
RETIRES FROM BUSINESS

He Will Be Succeeded By Former Crockett Expert

P. A. G. Meschaert, chief chemist at Oahu Sugar Company's plantation, will retire from active business at the end of the 1916 campaign and it is reported that U. Hartmann, formerly superintendent of Crockett refinery will succeed him. Mr. Hartmann is now at Waipahu familiarizing himself with the operations of this great mill.

Mr. Meschaert has achieved fame throughout the plantation world as inventor of the Meschaert system of grooving mill rollers, a mechanical aid to milling by which extraction has been increased an average 1.5 per cent. His invention is revolutionary in character and is being generally adopted in all cane countries.

It is reported that Mr. Meschaert intends to return to Germany after the war and will make that his home. He probably will move to Honolulu as soon as his successor is ready to undertake full control of the scientific end of sugar chemistry at Oahu mill.
